Head Coach: Andy Enfield

Gameday Newsletter Ep. V The Spectrum Strikes Back

It is high time for Aggie Basketball. Although the previous conference has been destroyed, opposing influences have failed to drive Utah State from their hallowed base and pursued them across the NCAA.

Evading the dreaded non-effective college basketball crowd stigma, a group of freedom fighters led by Stew Morrill have established this special base in the remote ice world of Cache Valley.

The evil lords, whatever their names, obsessed with outlasting wise Morrill, now cower in fear behind the single layer of mental protection with which they have equipped themselves. They have underestimated The Force. They have been disturbed by our special base. They have forgotten the sovereign preeminence... of The Spectrum.

The Aggies have finally come forward to prove their dominance to the galaxy. It is time for everyone to understand the firepower of this fully armed and operational battle-station. There are many arenas capable of destroying an opposing player's psyche, but the ability to simply destroy an opposing player's psyche is insignificant next to the power of The Spectrum! It's back in full force, prepared to create hell and darkness never before seen in its confines. and we will. Because we are The Spectrum, and you love us. We know.

And so our story begins! Welcome to the Bangarang, your go to source for all things heckle, dirt, and all around hype for our Aggies. We will be here, week in and week out, in an attempt to ensure that when all eyes are focused more than ever on our team (as well as us as a crowd) we give them the best show they've ever scene. That starts with getting organized and a deadly set of insults and cheers to demoralize our opponents and boost our boys! We're here to serve, so let us know what you think! Get back to us on twitter @usubangarang, or email us at usubangarang@gmail.com. Together, with this team, we can restore awesome to The Spectrum, and balance to the Force!

In All Honesty: A game preview

USC coming to the Spectrum kicks off the best schedule the Aggies have ever had. They are picked to finish 11th in the PAC12 but many say they will do much better. The Trojans return 2 starters from a team that went 14-18 last season. Those two starters, J.T. Terrell and Byron Wesley, combined for 21.9 ppg last season. Watch for these guys to be the leaders on the court for USC.

Also returning for the Trojans is 7'2" big man Omar Oraby. He isn't very mobile and isn't a major offensive threat. However, he will be an imposing figure and will alter a few shots while grabbing some rebounds.

Lacking in experience and with several transfers and a fresh crop of freshmen, the Trojans seem to be building for the future.

Overall, USC has a lot of athleticism but they are a young team who will be looking to establish an identity.

Our prediction: Don't expect a blowout, but the Aggies take care of business at home due to returning experience and a raucous Spectrum crowd.

Bangarang Staff shocked by lack of ability to make fun of Andy Enfield

As is fast becoming a tradition at USC, the Trojan's have a new coach in order to salvage yet another quickly fading program. After a 14-19 season, USC did the logical Hollywood thing to do and scrambled for the most en-vogue name they could find at the time. Enter former Florida Gulf Coast coach Andy Enfield, leader of the darlings of last year's NCAA tournament, founder of the #dunkcity movement (which, for those unfamiliar with the term, was a twitter hashtag based around how often and athletically FGCU players took the ball to the hole) and evidently a flashy enough name to move from a previously unheard of program to coaching in the Pac12. However, what is significantly more important about this hire is this.

Meet Amanda Marcum. Repeated Maxim cover model, all around babe, and wife of the new USC coach. We here at the Bangarang fully understand at least some of the reasons that these two are married (2 come to mind), and NONE of them have to do with Enfield's coaching skills. However, one has to assume that Trojans came up in several more ways than simply the X's and O's of courtship. It also gives us a little more insight into the #dunkcity movement (see the first parenthetical). We'll let you take that one as far as you want.

As we said, we here at the Bangarang fully endorse this relationship for, once again, at least 2 reasons. What can you say? Make sure that the Coach knows we approve of his choices. But please, remember to be classy about it. Seriously. Nothing crude or degrading. Just a solid showing of our support of the fact that this guy, even after his loss tonight in The Spectrum, gets to go home and get consoled by a Maxim model. To you, good sir, we give a resounding shout of "Bang-aw-rang."

Quickies - short and not so sweet

- Jalen Moore's nose gets in argument with Jalen Moore's afro... Guess who won?
- Immediately following, Jalen's Afro challenges Sean Harris' Flat Top to a "Hell in a Cell" Cage Match.
- Not to be outdone, Will Smith (not the actor, but the character from Fresh Prince) and early 90's Scottie Pippen volunteered to be referees for the fight. More details next week...

WARNING: DO NOT MAKE THIS FRICKIN' AWESOME GAMEDAY NEWSLETTER INTO A PAPER AIRPLANE. DO NOT THROW IT ANYWHERE NEAR THE DIRECTION OF THE COURT. STEW WILL BURN YOUR FACE OFF WITH LASERS FROM HIS EYES.

IF ANYONE SEES ANOTHER PERSON WITHIN THE CONFINES OF THE SPECTRUM DOING SO, YELL "THAT PERSON IS MAKING A PAPER AIRPLANE" AND POINT AT THEM. THIS MEANS EVERYONE KNOWS WHO THEY ARE, AND WE ALL CAN, EN MASS, YELL AT THEM VERY VICIOUSLY IN ABSOLUTE DISGUST FOR THE LACK OF TACT AND RESPECT THAT THEY'RE SHOWING FOR THE TEAM AND THE GAME. SERIOUSLY. RAT YOUR FRIENDS OUT. WE ENCOURAGE IT.

Introducing the Bangarang All-Name Team. You shall know it "The BANT"

Here's the beauty about covering college hoops: aside from the inspiring atmospheres and shining moments, one is sure to encounter some balls-ridiculous names. As this isn't something we Bangarangers like to ignore, welcome to round one of the Bangarang All-Name Team (BANT) - USC Edition!

Let's list some honorable mentions, then get our first two picks into the fold. Sound it out, kids.

Honorable Mentions - Samer Dhillon (because, dude... the "h?"), Chass Bryan (it's the name that comes with an itch), Kahlill Dukes (because, dude... the "h" again?) and Nikola Jovanovich (because a name like that certainly belongs to someone who could have given Jennifer Garner in "Alias" a run for her covert money).

USC BANT Inductees -

Strahinja Gavrilovic - Ignore the syllables and obvious hilarity that comes with any name ending in "vic." This inductee sticks itself solid into the BANT because... well... look closely... he pretty much has "ninja" in his first name. Anyone with any sense would be intimidated by a 6-9 Serbian ninja. It's a shame that all that gets squandered when you come to find out he averaged .3 points a game last year (no typos).

Pe'Shon Howard - I mean...really? Not Keyshawn? I'll even take Ke'Shon. Not even just Shon? I mean, unless you're really that big a fan of physical education, economic price-to-earning ratios, or polyethylene, "Pe" as a starting syllable just doesn't add up. I'll say this much more - this kid has the worst possible name to ever be included on any team called the "Trojans." And that's for more than one reason. Look it up.

Missing from tonight's game

Warning to all Aggie fans and potential sushi bar owners: the Trojans don't lose well. Like, at all.

Following a blistering 76-51 loss to Washington State last season Trojan chokers James Blasczyk and Dewayne Dedmon got involved in a physical altercation at a sushi bar - evidently USC hoopsters don't exactly take the lack of solid yellow tail with vegan rice too gracefully.

Note that in this case "physical altercation" translates to "beating the God-fearing piss out of some guy then sucker punching a woman (turns out public inter-gendered abuse isn't limited to the South Provo Betos)."

Both players were "suspended indefinitely for breaking team rules." Dedmon saw this as a golden opportunity to take his 6.7 ppg to the NBA a year early only to get cut from the Golden State Warriors - who, we may add, had a spare spot on the roster and still saw no use for him.

Blasczyk, on the other hand, found it more fruitful to play "desperate girlfriend" and applied for a sixth year of eligibility, because, even though he could only last seven minutes a game last season, to Trojan's those minutes were, by far, the most satisfying.

Unfortunately for us, his extension was denied and he will only be remembered as the "former USC player who only kind of looks like Brian Scalabrine."

Frotoshopping! The next great sensatino is sweeping the nation! Everything and everyone is growing the Jalen Moore Afro! Get your submissions in for inclusion in future Bangarang!

A Gentleman's guide to Spectrum Conduct How NOT to be a Gentleman

- WEAR BLUE: You might be reading this today without an AGGIE blue shirt on. This will be the last time. Why anyone would get excited for a game and not wear blue is beyond us. Just wear a gameday shirt. It's that easy. No white (including "White Out" shirts, we'll be watching), no gray, no baby blue, no pink USU shirts... AGGIE BLUE!!! If someone near you isn't wearing blue, give them some crap for it.

- Be LOUD: Get loud, jump around, lose your voice and remind people why we're one of the top 5 toughest places to play in the nation. Get into it a little for hell's sake (and we mean "Hell's sake" with total sincerity, because the Spectrum is Hell for visiting teams).

- "All about tempo": When that slow clap starts for the starting lineups, keep it SLOW!!! When you're chanting something ("defense", "stupid", "you will miss it") keep it slow. The best way to kill a good chant is to speed things up and get everyone out of breath.

- Don't be offended: This is The Spectrum. We're not the "nice, polite, support the visiting team" type of crowd. We're the in-your-face-make-your-life-a-living-hell crowd. We make the opposing five feel like they're playing an opposing five thousand. We're not a top 5 crowd in the nation because of kindness. Go to BYU if you want to play 'nice'.

NEW CHEERS FOR THIS YEAR: The Bangarang staff loves tradition, but we also love innovation. That's why we're spearheading two new cheers for this season.

- Free Throws: Put your hands in the air and make the "whoosh" sound after the made basket. The new part? Right after you woosh pump a fist into the air and scream "Bangarang" followed by the players' first name. Eg: "Bangarang Jalen!", or "Bangarang Spencer!", just like "Bangarang Rufio!"

- Dunks: This one comes from our favorite rapper, Froggy Fresh. After one of our boys throws it down, the front row in Section F will soon after yell, "Why is (insert opponent here) crying?" Then everyone yells back "'Cause he just got dunked on!" We'll likely repeat it a few times so join in as soon as you hear it and make it loud. We're breaking spirits here. Scan the QR code for the direct link to the Froggy Fresh music video so you can get up to speed with the rest of us. ----->

The Boo Box - Some verbal scorpions to drop in on these guys while they're trapped in here with us.

USC TROJANS - While attempting to dig up dirt on the opposing team, the Bangarang first went to espn.com and searched for USC to pull up their roster. Much to our confusion, the first program that came up was the Spartan's of USC Upstate, from the Atlantic 10 conference. Evidently, we'd been a little mislead when we were told of the prominence of the Trojan brand. They were supposed to be the biggest thing out there; the magnums of the college sports world. Our mistake.

#10 PE'SHON HOWARD - A transfer after playing 3 years for the usually high powered program at Maryland, Pe'Shon moved home to help take care of an ailing grandma. Or that was the official story. Playing upwards of 32 minutes a game for a lot of his career, and managing to score less than 3.3 points per game may have had more to do with it. To clarify, that means he scored 1 point every 10 minutes he played. Expect similar results.

#3 CHASS BRYAN - @chazzywazy While we haven't organized an official "all twitter" page, Chass would be first on our list so far. Ironically, didn't win our tweet of the week though. Bringing 1.8 ppg to the table from last year, he apparently compensates for a lack of stats with one hell of a twitter page. Twitter bio claims he is "God's Son". That's right. The capital "S" means he's Jesus. So we may need to take it kind of easy on him, considering that whole dying for our sins thing. Also referenced "pulling up the shopping center with a centerfold" which we can only assume means that coach's wife bought him groceries. A "Chazzy-Wazzy" chant is a must.

#14 STRAHINJA GAVRILOVIC - His 1.8 mpg and .3 points per game can only be attributed to one thing. He is far too stealthy to be seen scoring or even playing. We would suggest ridiculous throwing star and karate motions if he ever touches the ball. Or astonishment that the ball seems to simply be dribbling and shooting itself.

#20 J.T TERRELL - USC's leading scorer looks a little more impressive for the stat line, but makes up for it with the aforementioned Tweet of the Game. We take this as hopeful news that Pe'Shon's transfer home has motivated his grandmother to show of a recovery that she can once again don her favorite pants. We're also uncertain as exactly what "Tim's" are. In fact, we're going to be asking a lot of these questions to J.T. in the game.
